GOING ON RECORD WITH FAMILY FACTS

Some families have found it an advantage to keep a record of facts about their needs and activities and other miscellaneous facts. The Michigan Extension Service recently collected headings used in such records by various families as suggestions for others who may wish to start a similar book or file. The list includes the following:

Addresses, household and personal; automobile data; birthdays; books owned by adults and children; books borrowed; books lent; Christmas cards to be sent, supplies on hand, presents given previously, and suggestions; clubs, meeting days and dues; clothing, size or measurements for each member of the family; foods, preferred brands of purchased foods and quantities of home-canned foods; games and party suggestions; yard needs; garden plantings and suggestions; health record and nursing notes; household, brands of merchandise, purchasing dates, hints, measurements, things needed; insurance, dates when premiums fall due; inventory; magazine subscriptions carried; menus for company and holidays; music; prescriptions; travel done or planned.
